WINSTON-SALEM, NC, – Construction is underway in the Mews area of the 55 acre Graylyn Estate. The hotel/conference center centrally located in North Carolina between Charlotte and Raleigh Durham will re-open the Mews on April 1st unveiling this new enclave of 35 exquisitely renovated guestrooms, conference and dining space, fitness center, social networking space and much more.

The Mews was originally designed by Eccles D. Everhart as the stables for the Gray family's estate, although it never lodged horses. In honor of Mr. Everhart's work 1 of the 6 new striking and spacious suites at the Mews will adorn his name. Each of the guestrooms will feature new custom furnishings, fabrics, wall coverings, carpets and finishes and exude guest comfort with luxury linens, down feather comforters and Molton Brown amenities.

Sure to be a guest favorite will be the Silo Suite which is a two level suite with a round living area on the first level and a round bedroom on the second level with a connected staircase. The original curved thick and textured walls are powerful yet soft at the same time. The Louie Baker Suite will also not disappoint with its presidential bathroom featuring a beautiful soaking tub, oversized "tortoise shell finish" porcelain tile floors and, and a large specialty shower!

Sims Patrick Studio, an Atlanta-based interior design firm has truly succeeded in keeping the original French Normandy style architecture of the Mews while infusing it with the spirit of the Estate's Manor House by selecting the types and quality of materials that were used in the Manor House as the palate of materials used at the Mews. "The best way to describe our thinking and inspiration might be that if the Manor House is the living room of the property, the Mews is the Den!" said Libby Patrick, President of Sims Patrick Studios.

Graylyn's guests will certainly appreciate the unique magnificence of the Mews beauty, ultra private location, and full service experience like no other.
